THE ORACLE

OF NINETEEN HUNDRED AND TWENTY-TWO

PUBLISHED BY THE CLASSES OF JUNE, NINETEEN HUNDRED AND TWENTY-TWO, AND OF JANUARY, NINETEEN HUNDRED AND TWENTY-THREE, OF LANSING HIGH SCHOOL

VOLUME THIRTY-TWO

HERBERT A. HALL
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

JOHN GALBRAITH
BUSINESS MANAGER

Foreword

The Oracle Board feels that it is timely to give some explanation in connection with the new method of organization that was instituted this year. With semiannual promotion it became necessary to devise some means of representing the class graduating in January in an Annual. It was obviously impracticable to print and sell two different annuals during the school year so it was decided to have the two senior classes cooperate in publishing an Oracle in June. Under this method the Senior B class is represented in an Oracle several months before they actually graduate.

The following organization exists in this year's Oracle board. The editor-in-chief is chosen by ballot from the Senior B class and he in turn appoints six associate editors, three from each class.

The business manager is chosen by ballot from the Senior A class and appoints the assistant business manager and the assistant advertising manager from the Senior B class. This method gives each class an equal representation on the board and therefore no preference is shown.

So the classes of twenty two and twenty two and a half present this Oracle for nineteen hundred twenty two to the students of Lansing High School and trust that it will claim a high place among the Oracles of earlier years.

The Minutes of An Oracle Board Meeting

"The meeting will please come to order," Editor Hall announced to Betty Cummings and Louis Childs. "Before proceeding we had better round up the absentees." Ten minutes later the members of the board began to drift in and soon Boone Gross was dragged in between Mr. Legg and the Editor, uttering loud protests in vain.

"I have a little matter," said Clayton Force, "which I feel is essential to the welfare of the Board. You all know this girl we have to drag Art Eckhart away from every week. I don't know what her name is but we could be sure of Art if we appointed her an honorary member of the board. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I make a motion to that effect."

The motion was passed unanimously amid loud cries of approval from Ben Boyce who has certain designs of his own.

"The secretary's report please," yelled Herb after banging on the table for a few minutes.

Disorder breaks out in rear of room where Mr. Boyd and Miss Moore are engaged in a struggle over the missing volume. Mr. Boyd trips over a stool and falls headlong and Miss Moore returns and prepares to read.

"He was trying to read my class prophecy," panted Miss Moore as she turned the pages.

"By the way," said Herb looking around, "where's Johnny Galbraith?"

"He's down at LeClears seeing about a new camera," answered Lawrence Cook. "They claim that the strain of taking the faculty pictures was too much for it."

"Will YOU keep quite Boone?" asked Miss Crilly, making a dangerous thrust at him with her disengaged knitting needle.

"Yes, but tell me what you are knitting there," he replied.

"I think it will be a choker for you." Deathlike silence from the Gross quarter.

"Here are some cover designs that Helen and I have been working on," announced Art Eckhart, "pass 'em around." General deadlock over color, paper, design, and style ensues.

"I move we accept Helen's cover," said Morris Buckborough.

"I move to amend the motion that the colors be changed."

"I move we accept Art Eckhart's cover."

"I move we table the amendment."

"I move that a committee be appointed to look into the advisability of tabling the amendment and report at the next meeting.

Editor Hall gasped, turned several different colors and reeled against the table. Of one accord the board turned to Miss Crilly and Mr. Legg for advice. Mr. Legg is overcome and fanning himseslf and Miss Crilly manages to answer.

"The board may move all they wish but please don't move the Laboratory."

Finally the difficulty was disposed of and the editor asked, "Is there any more business?"

"I move we adjourn," spoke up the harrassed Boone.

"All those in favor respond with the usual sign," said the editor.

"Ay-y-y-y-y-y-y-y-y."

"Those opposed."

But the Oracle board was half way out of the building.

The Gold and White

Words by Aubyn Coopes

Music by Ed. Roh

When we have left old Lansing High School
Our worldly work to do,
Perhaps we'll turn to high school days
And the class of Twenty-two
And sing of all her victories
Her spirit, pep and fight,
And credit most of our success
To the class of Gold and White

We'll think of days that used to be
And courage, strong and bold
That won the many victories
For the class of White and Gold
And keep that spirit thru our life
To help big things to do
And credit most of our success
To the class of Twenty-two.

And when my friends you're in distress
And can't think what to do
Think back and see just what was done
By the class of Twenty-two.
How many a conquest she has won
In field and classroom too
And established many a precedent
Did the class of Twenty-two.

The Black and Gold

Words by Herbert Hall
Music by Lucy Woodworth

For good or ill they're almost done,
These four long golden years
We've fought and won, and fought and lost,
Through a maze of hopes and fears.
Straight past a hundred nameless perils
The gauntlet we have run,
And now we sigh as we look back,
For we see they're almost done.

And we made the fight like an army,
'Neath our colors of Black and Gold
Trying to keep the standard,
Of the classes passed of old.
A short time more and we'll be done,
And the story will be told,
Of a senior class that fought and won,
'Neath a flag of Black and Gold.

Literary

From the Editor's Pen

It is an ancient and accepted privelege of the outgoing classes to regale their long suffering faculty with sundry accumulation of sly remarks and parting jabs. This has been done to the great delight of all, except perhaps, the objects of merriment. The offenders at once recede into the blur of every-day affairs and vengeance is futile. The delighted lower classmen are innocent and therefore can laugh safely as they scan the pages of the Oracle. However, those good old times have gone, sad but true, they are irrevocably gone, but a mere incident in the great past. Why? The reason is very obvious; after the Oracle is out and part of the perpetrators of the outrage are departed there still remains the class of '23 or more accurately perhaps, the class of twenty two and a half.

It is they who must patiently bear the retaliations of a smarting faculty, and it is they who must perforce, be the culprits. It is inevitable that it should be so for our late confederates in crime have long since become immune. So here we are. The interest of the annual depends in a great measure on the number of well aimed thrusts we can lodge in the faculty and it has been our unswerving policy as publishers of old Lansing High's stellar publication to see that the very acme of interest is attained. The class of twenty two and a half is the martyr. Have pity on them, oh student body! Have at least some compassion on them oh injured faculty! Or else in the absence of the class of twenty two they must do an impromptu Marathon to the Biology lab', that place where there is always an ally.

We have striven to please and we hope we have not fallen below the high standards set by our predecessors.

The Senior classes would like to leave this advice for those just entering high school—choose your course of study for high school in advance and with much foresight and care.

Many Seniors have found out to their own sorrow how necessary this is. For they have desired to enter a college or some business, and have discovered that they are not qualified to do so because they have not taken the right subjects in High School.

So many students choose their studies apparently at random taking this subject because it interests them, this because they have heard it is easy, this one because they like the teacher and they go on with these studies without considering that they are wasting valuable time on something which will be of no use to them later. A good way for a freshman to get some idea of those studies which are the most valuable is to read over the entrance requirements of a number of colleges.

Any student who goes thru high school taking only the easy subjects is very foolish and he will find it out sooner or later to his own regret.

The Student Council

The student council method of administration is a new experiment in Lansing High School but from all indications the council that was organized recently is destined to be a success. The classes are represented in the council proportionally and the body is supposed to work with the faculty in making rules for the government of the student body. The representation by classes is as follows: the two senior classes, four members each, the two junior classes three members each, and the two sophomore classes two members each. The number from each class includes the president of the class who is an ex officio member of the council.

This plan for student government was proposed by the senior class graduating in June, 1922, and ratified by the other classes as soon as was possible. The Oracle Board desires to extend every possible wish for good luck and success to the new organization, believing that it means a distinct advancement over the previous methods of administration.

This is a year of transition, and the following policy has been adopted relative to the production of class plays in the future: the two senior classes, A and B, will co-operate in producing the usual senior play, while the familiar Junior Exhibitions came to a close last January with the memorable one given by the present senior B class. The arrangement concerning senior plays will become effective next year.

Although no one person submitted enough snapshots to win any of the prizes we offered, the Oracle board wishes to show its appreciation to the following people who handed in a dozen or less snapshots; Elgin Narrin, David Brown, Lloyd Service and Ruby Baily.

It Is To Be So.

(First Prize Story—Evelyn Mackey)

"It happened a long time ago, Charles, during the summer Cora and I spent at Mac's place in northern Michigan. It's an unusual story, man, a little weird, a little unwonted, full of longings and defeated hopes. And it was only the other day when Cora sent me up to clean the attic that I finally learned what become of—well, let me tell you.

We were all on the side lawn playing croquet, a game which we all had gotten down to a fine art from constant practice, when we heard the hack rattling over the rough road. This vehicle, Charles, was one of those old fashioned two seated buggies with a fringed top. It was pulled along slowly by an old nag with two feet already in the grave. We stopped in the middle of our game to watch the newcomer. It was someone for Mac's we knew, for that dilapidated structure never rolled over this road unless it carried a guest for Mac. And so, I say we stopped in the middle of our game. Who could it be? Maybe another dashing widow like Mrs. Watterman, or another lawyer from across the lake like Jim Lawson, a school teacher, a doctor? Could it be? Oh, who could it be? Would we like it? Would it fit into our little family? Would it be old or young, thin or fat? Would it be—Oh, would that nag ever reach Mac's. Then with a final jolt, as the thing settled in the road, it came to a halt. Old Joe hopped out with a suit case, and waited patiently for the extremely fat occupant to pry himself out. Indeed, it was all the poor fellow could do. And it was a funny sight, to see him search vainly for the little step, which he was finally able to locate with Joe's aid.

What a funny fellow he was! I remember him to this day as he stood there after landing safely on terra firma, with his straw hat pushed far back on his bald head, mopping his face with a grimy handkerchief. Evidently it has been hard work, this landing. He seemed not to notice us at all, but picked up his grip and opened the gate. Mac, our most admired host, cook and porter, ran out to meet him. 'Glad to see you, Coitek, glad to see you' we heard Mac say as he led him up the path. We did not hear the new arrival's answer, but we saw a smile which lighted up his face most brilliantly.

At dinner we all met him. He was not an old man, about thirty I should judge. His clothes were of the latest cut and of the finest material, but, Charles, Coitek did not grace the clothes nor did they become his rotund figure. Well, we did not welcome him. We couldn't understand why Mac should present this man at his table of paying guests. He was the strangest character I ever met. He spoke with a pronounced foreign accent, and his manners were dreadful. An uncouth, uneducated creature, we thought him. His coffee, for cooling purposes, was poured into his saucer, and sipped to some foreign tune I guess, at least none of us had heard it before, but became well acquainted with it before he left. He rattled his silver, ate with his knife and literally shoveled his food into his mouth. We marveled at the length of his arm. He could reach anything, anywhere on the table, with perfect ease. He certainly had accomplished the boarding house reach admirably.

It was not long, however, before we became fully aware of the fact that he was not the uncouth, uneducated person we thought him. He spoke freely of France, Germany, Italy, Africa and South America, to say nothing of Canada and our own country. In short, he had traveled the world over. He spoke fluently in six different languages, and could talk on any subject you might bring up. You may well know how surprised we were. We couldn't quite sense it. Here was a man to mark—Coitek his name, Poland his native country, no doubt, an education to envy and manners to abhor.

Mr. Coitek fell into the routine and we grew to know him better, and we liked him better too, in spite of his manners. There was no getting around it. He was a likeable chap. He never spoke of himself, though, or his business, and none of us asked him. And we met him only at meal times, for he stayed away from us, either walking or fishing or down on the dock—Ha! but I must tell you about his bathing. You know, Charles, he was afraid of the water, and would never go out much over his ankles. Nevertheless, every afternoon at four Mr. Coitek donned his gay little suit and proceeded to bathe his feet. Gradually he became the laughing stock of the boarders. We learned to smile when the coffee was sipped, giggled when the feet were washed, and rocked ourselves with laughter when, one day, we found Celia, Mac's Polish waitress, and our Polish gentleman in close conversation at the end of the dock.

Celia, was a girl beyond description. I'll not say that she was beautiful for she wasn't, but she was singularly attractive. Her face was full and nearly a perfect oval. Her black, heavy hair she combed from her face in an odd little knot in the nape of her neck. Her eyes were deep, steel gray. When she found you looking at her, she had a peculiar way of widening, them, when they turned to clear jade with glints of burning fire. Then the observer's eyes were averted. She seemed ever to be chiding you for looking at her, and Celia was good to look upon. There was something subtle, a sort of sweet sadness about her. There seemed always to be an air of mystery, of something hidden, of something dead and buried.

I'll never forget when she found Coitek looking at her. I noticed that he was not unaware of her presence and followed her closely with his eyes. She finally caught him looking at her across the table. The eyes widened as he gazed, and they turned to jade. Still he gazed, and he gazed unflinchingly into the fire. The fire in her eyes burned deeper and suddenly died, as did the jade, and the steel gray turned to a misty blue gray of early morn. She finally tore them away from him and rushed madly into the kitchen while Coitek resumed his eating. Mrs. Mac served the rest of the meal. Celia was not the kind of girl you could pat on the shoulder, nor did she invite your confidence. She didn't seem like the ordinary girl, but was more distinctly feminine. She rarely spoke, but when she did, it was some soft music in a foreign tongue. When you were in the girl's presence, you felt subdued and pacified, but when alone a most overpowering desire to laugh sized you. What there was about her, I don't know, but I said that she was indescribable.

And so we laughed when we saw her with Mr. Coitek on the dock. Celia's beautiful dark hair was a distinct contrast to Mr. Coitek's broad expanse of bald head. We could catch the two different accents in their voices, Celia's low, soft and determined, Mr. Coitek's deep and quick. Somehow, I felt guilty. Here we stood laughing at a budding romance for we thought it then. And a romance it was, Charles, but a romance that was never full grown. And the two on the dock were totally unconscious of our presence. But where was Olaf? Olaf, was Celia's most ardent admirer. He followed her from morning to night, jumping at her slightest command, and fulfilling her slightest wish. But Celia spurned his love the more he did for her, but Olaf "despaired not" and pressed his suit the harder.

From that day Celia was quite changed, but Mr. Coitek was his same bland self, sipping his coffee as usual and quite unaware of our apparent laughter. Celia, though, was indeed different. We took mental note that her hair was adorned with a fashionable new comb, most becoming to her rare type. She was bright and happy all through the day. We could hear her singing softly, yet passionately, in the kitchen, as she helped Mrs. Mac with the work.

But she kept an unflinching eye upon Coitek and another upon us, as though she feared that at any moment we might snatch him away from her.

At meal times we noticed this most, for she would burst into the dining room with a tray of dishes and set them down with a clatter, while her eyes gleamed with that curious mixture of jade and fire, and she surveyed us with a look that dared us to harm him.

Luckily for him, he was always first served, that coffee cup was always full, his butter dish never empty, his glass always filled, and his plate piled high with the choicest from the kitchen.

It was undeniably funny the way she watched over him. I wonder how we ever kept our faces straight.

And so the romance thrived. Celia and Mr. Coitek were together as much as possible. I happened upon them a number of times, and, as they appeared not to notice me, I never intruded upon their tete-a-tetes. In fact, we all left them pretty much alone, ,and they seemed to care little whether we noticed them or not. So goes it with the love lorn.

Sometimes I met them in the woods, again on the dock, another time up the beach a way. I wondered at the outcome, Charles. Was this Mr. Coitek, this man of the world, really in love with Mac's little waitress? Who was he? What was his business? You couldn't connect a man of his type with love. Was he playing with Celia? It was a baffling question, Charles, and always there was Olaf. He sought Celia all day as usual, but always she spurned him. I began to notice a worried look in his eye, and I was sorry for him for he loved Celia dearly.

Then came the day when I found Celia alone in the Crow's Nest, a quiet little place in a clump of linden trees, weeping as though her heart would break. Now, Celia was not the girl to cry over small matters, so I immediately guessed the trouble. I knew I should go away and leave her, but my pity for the girl and my desire to know the 'why of it all' prompted me to speak to her. She started, scolded me because I was not her lover, told me to go away, that it was none of my business, and finally poured out the whole story to me. He loved her, he said, he would write to her, but he couldn't marry her, not now anyway.

Charles, I laughed at first, but ended up by inwardly cursing the man. He made love to the girl, but said that he could not marry her, not now anyway. Now! He meant that he would not marry her at all. He had been playing with her, laughing at her! Write —Bah!

And so he went away, leaving a sorrowful sweetheart, a laughing bunch of boarders, an unconcerned host and a delighted Olaf. We none of us laughed at Celia though when she served us with red eyes, or when we saw her walking alone over familiar paths, with Olaf away behind.

Cora and I left a few days after Coitek, and so it was not until late the following fall that I learned the facts in the case, coming in the form of a letter from Mac. I became well acquainted with the old Scotchman and we corresponded for a while.

'As you were rather interested in Celia,' he wrote, 'I thought I would tell you that she is married. Yes—to Olaf. And I think she will be quite happy with him.

'You know, of course, that she was in love with Coitek. Everyone seemed to know it except May and me. However, after the summer rush was over, we began to notice that Celia was not looking well. We believed at first that it was the work during the summer. You know, Mr. J——, Celia has been with May and me for five years. When she came she was homeless, and May has been as a mother to her. So, when she seemed no better as the weeks passed, we became quite concerned over her. We asked her again and again to tell us the trouble. She said she was not ill, so, of course, we laid it to some other cause. Finally she told the whole story to May. We were shocked. We never guessed such a thing. If we had we should have put a stop to it in the beginning. Coitek told her he would write and had failed to do so. I know why. Which, Mr. J——, is greater to you, love for your wife, or love for your God? That is an absurd question, I know. In Mr. Coitek, it is love for his God. For long years Coitek had studied for the priesthood, having had first to educate himself, which he had undoubtedly done successfully. Then came Celia. Knowing Coitek as I do, I cannot believe that he was playing with her, and I have known him for some time. It was either Celia or his religion, his life long ambition. And so he went away, believing that it would make it easier for Celia. We will none of us ever hear from him again. It is to be so.'

So that's the story, Charles, as it happened many long years ago, and so it ends save for a few more facts. 'We will none of us ever hear from him again' wrote Mac. But contrary to his predictions, I heard from him—maybe I had better say 'of him' most indirectly 'tis true. In a newspaper which the heat of the attic had long since turned yellow, I read that a certain Father Coitek had left for Rome to plunge deeply into his work in a monastery there.

SENTENCE MANY IN CIRCUIT COURT.

Week End Crop of Malefactors Startling.

Judge E. D. Rich today had on the docket the greatest number of cases ever recorded in the annals of this court. The opening of proceedings was delayed somewhat when Police Detective Burdick was on the point of physical combat with bailiff, Claire Boughton, over the opening of several windows in the court room. The following were placed on probation for one year; for violation of Blue Laws: Boone Gross (2nd offence); for assault with intent to do great bodily injury, Coleman Howell; this charge was brought by Lawerence Cook, proprietor of a local bakery; for furnishing High School students with food while on hall duty. David Boyd, Boyd is a janitor at the Central High School and has been arested for several like crimes recently.

END OF WORLD AT HAND DECLARES LOCAL PASTOR

Prepare for Day of Judgment is Plea!

Speaking to a house filled to three times its capacity Maurice Davies, pastor of the Reformed Community church here expressed the belief that the end of the world was at hand. "Pay your back pew rent," was his admonition, "that you may stand before the gates pure."

CIRCULATE PETITIONS FOR ALDERMAN OF EIGHTH WARD.

Campaign Headquarters Opened in City Library

Desirous of filling the vacancy in the city council caused by the resignation of Miss Evelyn Mackey to accept a position as housekeeper for S. H. Fulton of this city, Linden Glazier has circulated twenty five petitions among the employees of the city piggery for his nomination. Mr. Glazier is very anxious to secure the position as it will give him a legitimate excuse for arguing with his better half, Mrs. Glazier, nee Seeley, who is from the first ward. It is to be hoped that the prospective Alderman will advocate the removing of the Galbraith Cheese Company's factory from Grand avenue as it has become a public pest.

LOCAL BILL BOARD OPERATOR AND SIGN PAINTER SAILS FOR EUROPE

Will Attend International Convention of Advertisers.

New York, June 13—Howard Dunlap, local sign painter and bill poster sailed on the Aquitania for Naples where he is planning to attend the third annual convention of the International Brotherhood of Bill Posters which is being held jointly with the first annual convention of the International Order of Banana Vendors of which Mr. Morris Buckborough is the American delegate. Mr. Dunlap has been making exhaustive experiments along the line of advertising and expects to present a new and novel method of mixing paste for posting bills. Mr. Dunlap's expenses are paid by the local chapter of the brotherhood, number 999, and it is needless to add that he is going with the other delegates in Steerage.

FORTY-EIGHT LOCAL MILLINER DEALERS CLOSE SHOPS.

High Cost of Feathers Given as Cause. Interstate Commerce Commission Investigating.

Acting under orders of the Grand Lodge of Milliners situated in Detroit, forty-eight local milliner dealers closed their doors at four o'clock yesterday and assembled in the union hall where they were addressed by Miss Jean Goodnow, head of the union here. By a unanimous vote it was decided to place pickets before all local meat dealers to prevent illegitimate purchase of chicken feathers.

GREENWICH VILLAGE DISTURBED

The actor's colony here was shocked today by the raid on Lola Avery's notorious tea room, the Salt Cellar. Several well known people were detained including David Bishop, the cubist painter; Keith Hicks, publisher of the new paper, the Soap Wrapper; the Russian dancers, James Stewart and Loretta Fillian; and Christine Bauch, author of the well known book, "Rough on Rats and Rougher on Men.".

The complaint lodged against the proprietor was that of disturbing the peace by serving onions in her tea.

PERUNIA TAKES A JUMP

Buying Heavy at Close of Market

New York, July 3—Perunia, the wonder working patent medicine of the Boyce and Son Cure All Co. since its debut on the market last week has never risen so high as it did during the near panic in "The Street" yesterday. The Market closed with Perunia standing 231 with 400 asked. The new concern has been capitalized at $150,000,000.35.

BROKER IS FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE

Offices Ruined by Angry Crowd. Police Are Powerless.

The local brokerage firm of Walters & Walters has been dissolved due to the divorce of the two members. The senior partner Peter Walters is reported to have taken passage on a freighter for the Argentine while the Junior partner, Mrs. Walters, nee Watson has been released on bail of $5,000. The crash came following a report of divorce which was extensively circulated. Enraged creditors and stockholders stormed the offices this morning and practically ruined the establishment. Police officers were swept aside and even the state police were powerless against the mob.

CATTLE MEN MEET

At the annual convention of the Heavy Heifer Herders which is being held at East Lansing this week, President Gourley of the association will give a lecture on "Choral Cow-bells for Cattle". Mr. Ed Roh who has been experimenting with these bells for 30 years will demonstrate them on any cow which is brought to the meeting.

FIGHT IN SENATE

The meeting of the national Senate yesterday was disturbed by a violent argument between Senator Michels of Alaska and the chief page, George Cottrell. The trouble started when the page persisted in snickering at the Senator who was speaking with much fervor on the bill introduced by Senator Beaumont from Michigan, to the effect that the tax on hair nets and Frost-bites be removed. Order was at last restored by the Vice President, E. Cummings.

COOPES-SPEDDING NUPTIALS

One of the most beautiful weddings of the month took place yesterday when Miss Berdice Spedding became the bride of Mr. Aubyn Coopes, the influential young politician of Eaton Rapids. To the beautiful wedding march strains, rendered by Miss Bonnie Bramble of the conservatory, the charming bride ascended to the altar. She was preceded by the Duncan twins, Hazel and Hazelette, charmingly innocent with their golden curls and pink sashes. The bride was wonderfully girlish looking in her gown of brocaded satin, which has been worn by the eldest daughter of each generation of the Spedding family since it was first brought over in the Mayflower. Her tulle veil was caught in place by a diamond pin, her only ornament, the gift of the groom. A seven course wedding dinner followed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Alderman, Mrs. Alderman formerly Thelma Johnson is a cousin of the bride. The bride and groom, after a trip to Niagara Falls will make their home with the bride's parents until housing conditions are bettered.

Miss Martha Niles is leaving for an extended trip to Mars, Saturn and Jupiter in her search for specimens to be used in connection with her geological work as assistant to Mr. M. A. Leach as physics instructor at M. A. C.

The regular meeting of Message Circle Number Six will be with Miss Ann Gale this evening. Thelma Beaumont will act as medium. The public is invited.

Charming little Susie V. Cottrell celebrated her eighth birthday by entertaining several of her little friends at the Country Club yesterday afternoon. A delicious luncheon was served and the rest of the afternoon spent in bridge. The petite Misses Margaret F. Corcoran and Georgia W. Walters received high score. The honorees were each presented with the latest novelty in vanity cases.

At a beautifully appointed dinner party Mrs. Andrew Schoolmaster announced the engagement of her daughter, Ernestine B. to the Count de Bors. Although Miss Schoolmaster is only sixteen she already shows signs of being as famous a society leader as was her mother. She was presented with a beautiful statue of Lincoln by her mother, who advised her to spend a great deal of time near it.

Chief Justice of Michigan Supreme Court, Miss Marjorie Reniger left Lansing today for a brief fishing trip in Northern Canada. Judge Reniger is nearing a nervous collapse, due to the trying ordeal of the Norton vs Norton case, Mrs. Norton though crushed by sorrow and publicity lifted her tear stained eyes to our representatives and said, confidentially. "He treated me worse than a dog." Upon being granted her divorce Mrs. Norton resumed her maiden name of Miss Ruth Hull and has expressed the intention of taking up Social Service work.

To Mr. Howard Schram belongs the honor of being the ping pong champion of Michigan. Mr. Schram easily defeated his opponents until he came to his wife, formerly Agnes Gregg. She seemed to outplay him at every turn until he finally hissed, "I'll cut down your allowance if you beat me!" From then on Mr. Schram found it easy going.

The Knights of Pythagoras will hold their regular weekly Oyster Supper Thursday evening of this week. The Supreme High Marshal Mr. David Peck is asking all knights to come with their ladies. The Past Worthy Henchman, Cedric Blanchard adds the news that, due to the fact that oysters are not good in months without "R" in them, probably roast beef will be served.

Lansing High School is fortunate in having on its alumni list the name of Philip Sprang, '22, the brilliant author whose new book "Evidences of Disorganized Mentability" is having a tremendous sale

The ladies auxiliary of the Sons of Damon, local lodge number 43 will hold a box social at the home of Miss Lucy Woodworth, Supreme Worthy Matron of the order. Members will not be admitted except on presentation of due reciepts.

Miss Christine Bauch has again given society a severe jolt by her sudden elopement and marriage with Donald Hands. The bride's parents had engaged, Graessle and Eggenberger private detectives on the case and were about to give up when they received a radiogram which head as follows, "Donald and I have eloped and very happy, much love, Christine."

"A Sea Dream"

Lucy Wilson—'22

(First Prize Poem)

The sound of the surf beating high on the sand,
The whir of a sea-gull's wings;
The sight of a ship far out from land,
And the song the sailor sings;
The splashing spray dashed back from the rocks
With a crashing, crumbling roar;
And the sullen sea that gibes and mocks
As it pounds upon the shore.
I long for these, and a dripping sail
That flaps and pulls in the breeze:
I long for the wind that becomes a gale
As it rushes o'er turbulent seas.

I want the sharp sting of the salty spray,
And the motion of heaving decks;
The guiding stars that paint the way
O'er curving waves dotted with flecks
Of briny foam. While the sea-bird's cry
Mingles with that of the wind
Which batters the ship with a laugh and sigh;
And into our ears is dinned
The moan of the sobbing, sighing sea
With its song of struggle and strife.
All these I long for; they are to me
The realization of life.

House of Representatives

The House of Representatives has been able to uphold its reputation as one of the leading literary societies in the Lansing High School this year.

The political party spirit of the House has run high throughout the year, although the Independent party was disorganized, leaving only the Republican and Democratic parties. Added interest was aroused by the division of each party into four debating teams.

Since the fundamental purpose of the House is to educate rather than to merely entertain, the training obtained by the members is practical and valuable, as there are always opportunities to practice public speaking. The debates and discussions are held over bills of National and State importance.

There were many bills introduced in the House of which the following are typical:

"Senator Newberry should be refused his seat in the United States Senate."

"The United States Government should sell the Muscle Shoals to Henry Ford."

"A bonus should be paid to all World War veterans by the United States Government."

Altogether, the House of Representatives has spent one of the most complete and useful years of its existence.

Adelphic

The Adelphic girls feel that they have had a most delightful and profitable year. The work of the year has consisted of miscellaneous programs on varied subjects: Musical numbers, readings, interesting literary studies, and spirited debates. There was also a mock banquet held in the Domestic Science room, which consisted of toasts bearing on table manners. In the social line many pleasant feeds have been held at homes of the members.

The society owes much of its success to its faculty advisors who have faithfully guided its undertakings and offered appreciated inspiration and aid during the school year.

Frasoris

The members of the Frasoris Literary Society cherish the fact that Frasoris is the oldest literary society in the Lansing High School.

The work of the past year, although of a miscellaneous character, was based upon American poetry and prose, papers on Michigan writers, Edgar Guest, Carleton, and Curwood, offered entertainment and instruction. Recent writers of note such as Frost, Lindsay and others, also were studied.

At a special meeting held November tenth, Mr. Rockwood, a member of our High School Faculty, gave a talk based upon his personal observations of Armistice Day. Frasoris feels greatly indebted to him for doing so much for them, mentally, morally, and spiritually.

A number of feeds and a picnic are in the list of events enjoyed by the members of Frasoris for the year 1921-1922.

Euphronian

Euphronian holds the enviable reputation of being the first girls' literary society formed in Lansing High School and has continued to uphold the standard it set from the first. This year under the guidance of Miss Campbell and Miss Lyman has been well spent. The programs have been miscellaneous in character but very instructive. The study of artists and their masterpieces was the work of the first semester. Book reviews, outside speakers and papers on important subjects filled the second semester. On the whole the girls feel that they have gained much this past year.

Euripidean

The Euripidean Girls have spent not only a successful and profitable year but also a most enjoyable one.

A varied program has been given during the past year. The Euripidean society is fortunate in having much talent among its members in musical and elocutionary lines. An address on the War was delivered by Rev. Jockinson of the Pilgrim Congregational church, and a most interesting program was devoted to Spanish works of art and artists. At the Christmas program a mock banquet was served, and toasts were responded to by several of the members.

The social activities of the year have taken the form of feeds and a "weenie roast."

Much of the success of this year has been due to the assistance of Miss Barber, the Faculty Advisor.

Cliosophic

The members of the Cliosophic literary society feel that they have spent a record year under the direction and assistance of their new advisor, Miss Boyer. They feel that much of their success is due to this aid.

The programs have been devoted to the study of modern authors and poets, with a variation of "Movies" and special entertainments. On Nov. 10th the Cliosophic was entertained by Frasoris, the speaker, Mr. Rockwood, a member of our faculty, delivered an intensely interesting and entertaining address on "What Nov. 11th means to us."

The social activities of the society have not been neglected, for the members have enjoyed feeds, and especially a "weenie roast" at Okemos Flats.

La Sociedad de Espanol

The Spanish society is a newly organized club for the benefit of students interested in Spanish work. It has been the aim of the members of the society to perfect their use of the Spanish language, and become more acquainted with the customs and conditions in Spain, and Spanish America.

At the different meetings of the year many interesting speeches about Spanish authors and customs have been given by members of the society. Successful endeavors have been made by the members to make this both a literary and social club. The feature of one of the meetings was the interesting comedy, Zaraqueta, which was presented for the parents of the members. This was followed by an informal party and pinata.

As a new society the members have proved it to be a very educational and profitable enterprise for the Spanish Department.

The French Club

The French Club was organized in the fall and has been conducted successfully through this, the first year of its existence.

The Club consists largely of members who are now studying the language, though it is open to all students of French, even if no longer taking the subject. The object of the organization is to entertain as well as to instruct, and to give a different opportunity for the use of the foreign tongue than is afforded the student when it is confined to class room study. As far as possible French has been the language used in the meetings.

If the future of the club can be judged by its first year, it promises many enjoyable and useful years from French students.

The Alumni Association

Donald Sessions, President, 1921-22.

It has been often said that the strength of any educational institution is in its alumni, and that unity of organization making for concentration of individual effort, increases the efficiency of a body in proportion to the completeness of such organization.

That the members of the Alumni Association of Lansing High School are, as individuals, actively interested in the welfare of the school is conclusively demonstrated by the fact that practically every activity, social, business or educational is guided directly or indirectly by an alumnus. In addition to this those members who are less active have by their friendly attitude helped to place the High School in an enviable position whereby its teachers, business and executive officers enjoy an unusual degree of confidence from the people of the city. It remains now to concentrate this spirit of helpfulness that a higher degree of achievement may be attained. To this end the Association is making an extended effort to establish and maintain communication with all its members, to keep them informed as to the various activities in which the Association is now engaged and to obtain from them suggestions for the future.

Closely allied with the activities of the Association are those of the Student Benefit Club. This club has established a substantial fund for the assistance of students in the Senior High School and graduates who wish to continue their studies in some college or university. At this point I deem it entirely proper to interpolate a word of praise for Miss Etta Wilbur whose efforts and ability to "stick by the guns" has made possible the things thus far achieved. Without receiving any large donations in the way of endowments, she has practically by her own efforts built this fund so that a number of deserving students have been helped and many educations completed. The Alumni Association looks to its members for active support of this project and hopes through its organizatin to accelerate this movement. It deserves the support not only of Lansing High School students and graduates but that of every citizen of our city.

We look back with pleasure upon the achievements of our Alumni Association in the past and ahead to greater fields of activity.

DRAMATICS

Junior Exhibition of Senior A Class

On March 2, 1921 the class of 1922 presented its Junior Exhibition at the Gladmer theater. Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew" was the play offered and the cast gave a remarkably creditable interpretation of it, presenting the comedy with a grace and finish not often witnessed when Shakespeare is played by amateurs. The excellent choice of players was made by Miss Derby who very ably directed the production. The committee in charge consisted of Martha Niles, chairman, Morris Buckborough, Ruth Hull, Fred Loveday, William Graessle, Marian Bishop and Benjamin Boyce. Harold Merillat was Business Manager and Gene Burhams, Advertising Manager.

Gwendolyn Kelly, playing the part of Katherine, the vivacious and tempestuous shrew, was the star of the performance and caused much sorrow among the actors and much laughter in the audience by her unruly temper. Jasper Lewis, playing the part of Tusentio with remarkable ease of manner, displayed unusual ability. Elizabeth Cummings made a dainty and adorable Biauca and the difficult role of Petruchio was very well taken by Charles Cummins. James Stewart played the comedy part of Grumio very well.

Junior Exhibition of Senior B Class

With its three plays, the Junior Exhibition, presented December 9, 1921, can be considered a most fitting production, as the close of a long line of successful Junior Exhibitions. The three play plan, altho a departure from the general custom was successful because it permitted more to take part and also gave the audience a variety in program. Altho the parts consisted of everything from the modern husband to the maiden lady of years ago they were well played and Miss Derby and the Juniors deserve much credit for the success of the final Junior Exhibition.

The Peabody Pew in its one act concerns itself with a Dorcas Society meeting, during which the church is cleaned. As the ladies reach the Peabody pew, the gossip turns to Justin Peabody who has left town ten years previously. The ladies leave until Nancy Wentworth is left alone, and soon Justin enters and claims her as his bride.

Evening Clothes, a one act comedy was next presented. Mr. Roberts has promised to follow his wife, later in the evening, to a musicale. Mr. Campbell calls for him and a search for the evening clothes begins. The contents of closets and drawers are strewn about the room, but the suit does not appear so the maid is sent to borrow several suits, which prove to be misfits. Mrs. Roberts returns and having learned the cause of her husband's absence, explains where she carefully laid away the suit.

In The Title, we find that Tranto Straight has persuaded Hildegarde Culver, the daughter of a government official, to write for his paper, some articles against titles. She had signed these articles, Samson Straight. Mr. Culver is offered a title but he and his son and Hildegarde are against accepting it while his wife and his secretary, Miss Starrey, seeing only the glory they will gain, make him promise to accept. Mrs. Culver eventually admits herself in the wrong, after the real Samson Straight is discovered, and after she has found that Hildegarde wrote the articles against titles. However at the very end of the play the title honor is accepted in order to save the family honor.

Senior A Play, June, 1922

The dramatic ability of the Senior A Class was displayed on Senior Class Day by the decided success of "Peg O'My Heart." The story of the lovable Irish "Peg" is well known and irresistible. Peg, with her charming Irish brogue and her country ways goes to live with her severe and dignified aunt, Mrs. Chichester, who is the doting mother of Alaric and the languid, society loving Ethel. Then Peg's trials and tribulations set in, and the delightful humour of the play, which is so thoroughly enjoyable, is brought out. Finally everything comes out all right and she and Mr. Jerry proceed to "live happily ever after."

The play was under the direction of Miss Derby and the committee in charge, consisting of Elizabeth Cummings, Ernestine Bolter, Robert Kemper, Margaret Foote, and Herbert Stickle.

DEBATING

Debating

Our debating teams have passed through one of the most successful seasons in the history of debating in the Lansing High School. The teams won four out of the five debates scheduled and amassed fourteen out of a possible twenty points toward the state championship. This established a new school record in this activity, which, it is hoped, will even be betterd next season.

Lansing High took a forward step this year when it became affiliated with the Michigan High School Debating League. The teams usually have four or five debates during the season and are allowed one point for each judge's vote favorable for them and one point for the decision. This makes it possible for the team to win as many as four points in one debate. Towards the end of the season the teams having won the highest number of points meet and decide the state championship. The question determined by the league which was debated this year was: Resolved—that the principle of the closed shop in American Industry should receive the support of public opinion.

Miss Stowe and Miss Barber who coached the teams, deserve a great share of the credit for our success in debating, Mr. Brown, the business manager was also of great assistance.

MUSIC

Music

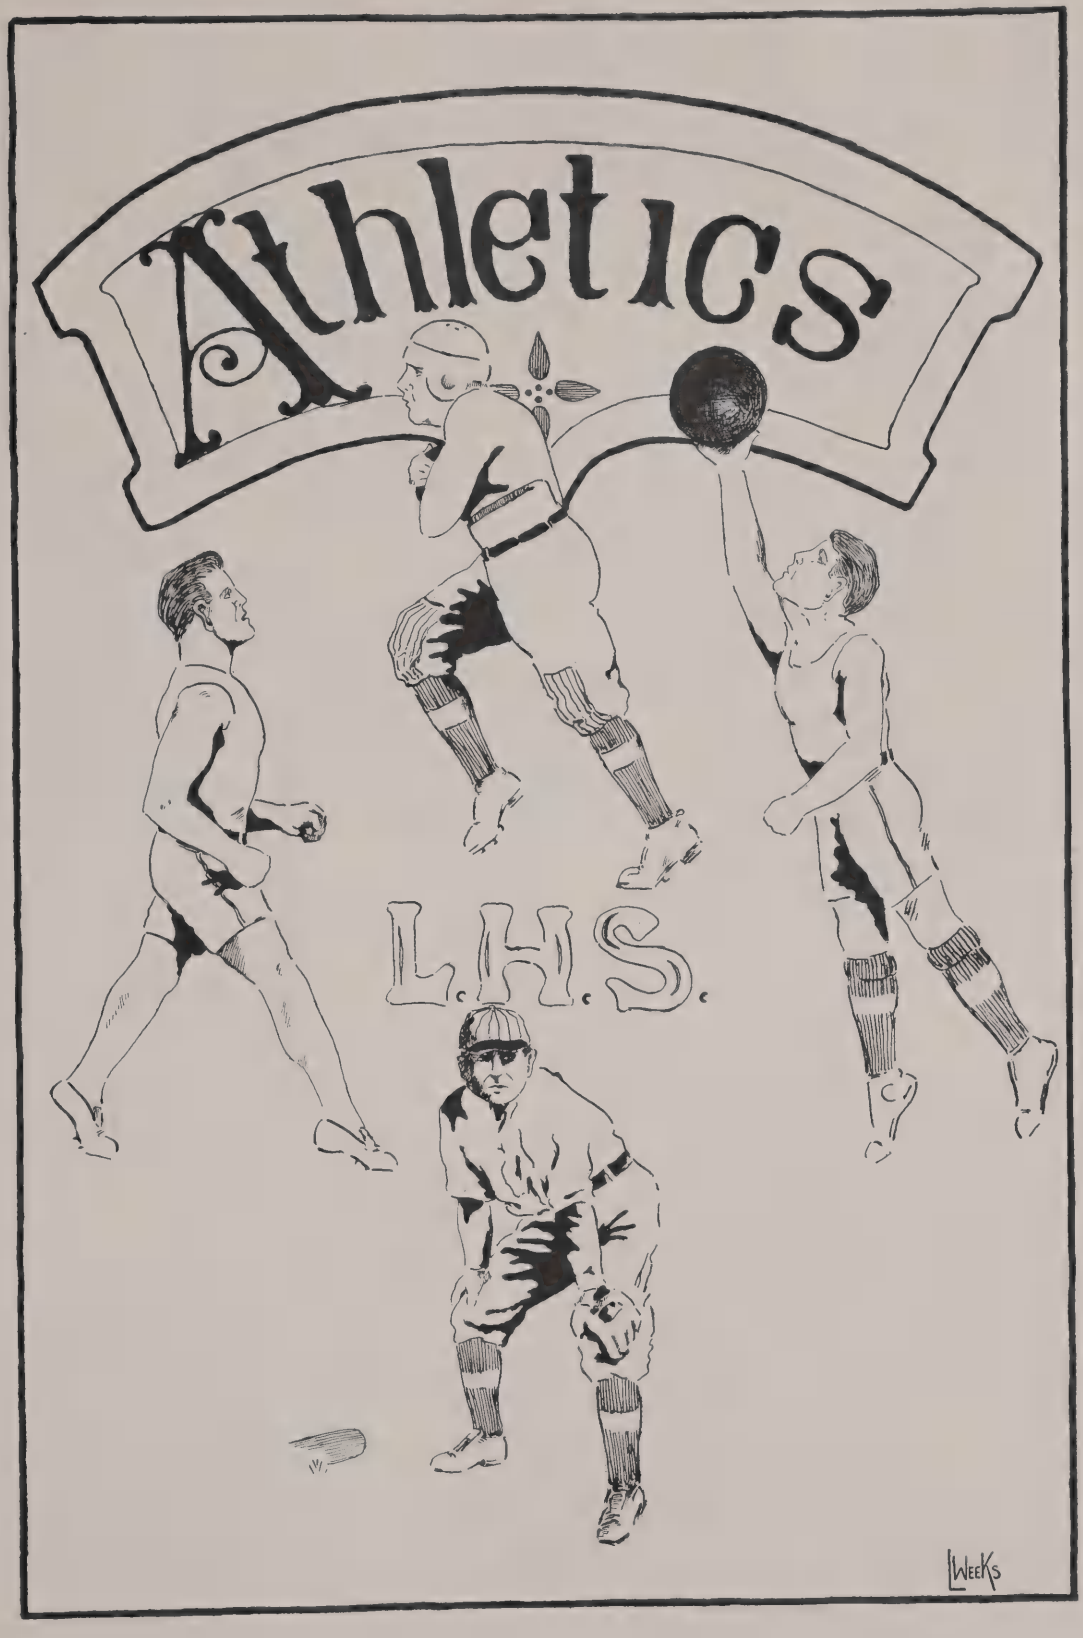

The music department this year has been striving toward greater development and higher attainments. Under Mr. Stephens' direction the several organizations have been working faithfully and ultimate success is assured them.

There is a large mixed chorus, a glee club of boys and one of girls, all of which are doing splendidly. Their yearly production was the musical comedy "In Old Louisiana," which was directed by John Wilson Dodge and May Hewes Dodge and was very successful.

Although the band of sixteen pieces has not yet become very proficient, the orchestra of forty pieces, despite a great change in membership has reached a high stage of excellence for a high school orchestra. Their studies have been both classical and popular in scope.

The department at the time of writing is planning to compete in many of the events at the third annual State High School Music Contest at Mt. Pleasant. Last year our orchestra won first place and the year before Lansing High School won the cup, so it is very probable that she will make a place for herself this year also.

FOOTBALL
WEEKS

Football

Lansing High School 1921 football season was notable for three features; our green team, our pre-season camp and the Julian benefit game.

The graduation of nine men on the football team, last June, all of whom had played for at least two years on Big Red teams, left us with only two experienced men as the nucleus of a team. Realizing this and inspired by a desire for another championship eleven, the business men of the city supplied the funds necessary to carry on a pre-season training camp. The coach selected Clear Lake as the most suitable place near by, and on August 28, fifty hopeful aspirants for gridiron honors departed for ten days intensive training in football lore. Their departure was effected by automobiles obtained for the occasion.

The boys spent the following ten days at real practice. The gridders returned the day before school opened, a hardened bunch of men well versed in the rudiments of football, and each having a warm spot in his heart for the men of the town who had made possible the great success of the camp.

However in spite of the pre-season training and the way the boys fought in every game, circumstances combined to wrest from them the expected championship. This was due principally to the fact that our green team was forced to meet the strongest teams in the state so early. After two defeats at the hands of Saginaw teams we got into our stride and a string of victories marred only by the tie game with Ann Arbor, tells the story better than any words. Our interscholastic schedule was ended when on a mud covered gridiron the Big Red team trampled over the Blue and White of Detroit Central and won 35-0.

Although this completed our schedule it did not mean the last of the football games for Lansing. We received and accepted an invitation from the M. A. C. freshmen to meet them in a game on Thanksgiving day. The proceeds went to Carp Julian, the greatest athlete who ever wore the Green and White. The freshman team was the strongest, M. A. C. has known, being composed largely of former Lansing High Stars. The game resulted in a 21-0 defeat for us but where all is taken into consideration the showing was exceptional. This it seems was rather a brilliant close to an otherwise mediocre season.

The Lansing High School Basket Ball team completed its 1922 schedule with a defeat at the hands of Pontiac after a series of heart breakers.

The season was one of ups and downs from the first, the team winning from first class teams and losing to second raters. The team showed flashes of brilliancy coupled with a lack of team work and consistency. After winning from Nashville in the opener by a comfortable score the boys journeyed to East Lansing and there in the "cheese box," gymnasium lost to the College City team. However this defeat seemed to spur the team on and the next few games resulted in wins. Then the big slump came and, playing teams that they had earlier in the season defeated, the Big Reds, way off form, were forced to accept one defeat after another, all of them by two or three points. Ineligibility coupled with injuries slowed the team up to some extent.

But we have neither alibis nor excuses to offer, and are simply willing to accept this rather mediocre season with the spirit that has always characterized Lansing High. And with six of this year's squad back next year we shall expect a winner.

Despite the poor showing made by his team we feel that Capt. Roh is deserving of All-State honors and there is no doubt that he would have been among the first five had Lansing been represented at the final tournament at Ann Arbor, where the mythical team was picked.

Interclass Boy's Basket Ball

The winner of the Interclass Basket Ball title this year was the Senior A class which emerged victorious from every game except two, toose with the Sophomore and Junior A classes. The board of control had promised the winners of the Interclass series a trip to see a Basket Ball game outside the city, but being unable to carry out this plan they secured as a substitute, sppace for the winner's picture in the Oracle.

The members of the team were: R. Wright, Captain; A. Schoolmaster, T. Johnson, J. Galbraith, W. Ballmer, V. Gauss, F. Loveday, and L. Clark.

TRACK

Track for Nineteen Twenty-Two

The track season this year was marked by several important victories for Lansing that bid fair to place her among the foremost schools of the state in this sport. The first event of the season was the Interclass meet that annually decides the winner of the Longyear cup. This was donated last year by Mr. Frank Longyear, a former track star of L. H. S., to help stimulate an interest in track. Last year it was won by the Senior Class and this year the Sophomore A class captured the trophy with a total of 59 points. Other scores in the meet were:

Junior B	21
Senior A	22
Senior B	6

This year's interscholastic schedule started off with two memorable triumphs for Lansing. First Saginaw Eastern was beaten April 29, on the M. A. C. Field. On May 13, Lansing won in an Interscholastic meet at Kalamazoo Normal with a total of 41 points, capturing six cups. This was the first victory of this kind for Lansing in 16 years and is a date well worth remembering.

Other dates set for meets are:

Battle Creek, at Battle Creek	April 29
Ann Arbor, at Ann Arbor	May 26-27
Intercholastic meet, at Lansing	June 4

The regular members of this year's track team were:

Society in the Senior Classes

The Senior A Class

The first social event of the class of '22 occurred in the form of the Freshman picnic. It certainly rained, but we had some time.

The second year brought the Sophomore Banquet. In June we had our picnic again. Mr. Hoge was our chaperone!

The Junior Hop in 1921 was the best ever—just ask Bob Currie! Then April rolled around and we were introduced to another banquet. Next came the picnic when the Senior B's, then the Junior B's ran off with our ice cream. Calamity!

The Senior Year brought our successful informal party and then Class Day. No one will ever forget the carnival and Ben Boyce! The Senior Banquet occured in May. Finally came the Alumni Banquet and commencement and our social life in L. H. S. was ended.

The Senior B Class

Through the scheming of Fate we were not started on our social toboggan until our Sophomore year which saw the Sophomore Picnic and the banquet, both never-to-be-forgotten events.

Then came the Junior Picnic and later the Junior Banquet that was held in conjunction with the Junior B class.

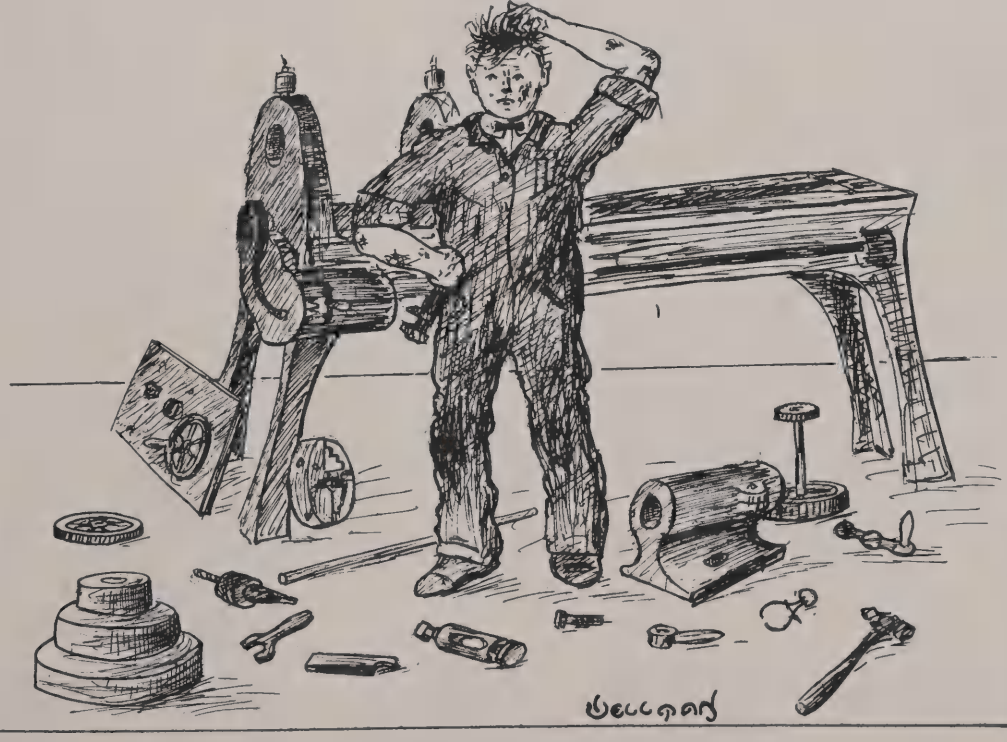

That's all, but we have a half year to complete our calendar and we wish to say (with all due respect to our friends at the top of the page) that all manner of Senior functions will reach their positive zenith during our last semester here.

The Industrial Course

The purpose of the Industrial Course in the Lansing High School is to fit young men for useful employment. By useful employment is meant to train them for effective entrance into a particular trade or industrial pursuit.

Among the principal trade groups may be mentioned the metal trades, the building trades, the electrical trades and the printing trades. Within the metal trades there are such special trades as the following: Machinist, tool-making, wood-turning, mill work. Among the building trades are: Carpentry, plumbing, inside wiring, bricklaying, steamfitting, concrete working, and sheet metal working.

We have enrolled 109 students who alternate one week in school and the other week in a factory.

The Knights of Industry is an organization to promote the general welfare of the students in this department. All students in the course are members of this association.

Faculty Advisor---------- Ralph B. Peterman

As a method of promoting the interests of the Commercial Department of Lansing Central High School and of the pupils in that department, the Central High Commerce Club has been organized with an initial membership of sixty people. Any person in the High School, having two or more commercial credits and having done good work in all subjects for the past semester, may join the club.

The Club aims to give the students practical knowledge of business and working conditions, by bringing the members of the Club into closer contact with employers of clerical labor in the City of Lansing. The Club also aims to raise the school standards in typewriting and shorthand by means of competitive contests to be held annually by the Club. To this end the Reo Motor Car Company and the Olds Motor Works have donated to the Club two loving cups to be awarded by inscription to those having the best recordss in these subjects in the contests. The Club aims to have business men of Lansing come to meetings of the Club as speakers on subjects in which they are interested and as experts in their line of commercial work, thus promoting a better understanding between the business men and the students.

Albion College

A GROWING COLLEGE IN THE HEART OF A GROWING STATE
Rev. John W. Laird, L. L. D., President

ALBION is a Christian, Co-educational, Liberal Arts College, equipped to give its students not only a liberal education, but a mental, social and moral preparation for life.

LANGUAGES, Sciences, Economics, Philosophy, History, Bible, Home Economics, Business Administration and Music are taught by competent professors and instructors.

ALBION has an enviable record in Athletics, Debating and Scholarship. Her history is rich in championships.

PARENTS desiring for their children a college that stands for accurate scholarship, clean athletics, and nobility of character, will do well to consider Albion.

ALBION COLLEGE is the educational hub of Michigan Methodism and in her ideals and standards reflects the glory of the great Methodist Church.

The Choice of Michigan

It is a known fact throughout our school that we have among us one who has had the honor of traveling with Robert Louis Stevenson.

Warren Parker traveled a long way with Mr. Stevenson, while the great author was writing his "Travels with a Donkey."

Bud Brown (upon arising in the morning goes to dresser to look in mirror, absent-mindedly picks up hair brush, and bursts out.) "My Gosh! But I need a shave!"

Chemistry Department

A complete Record of Events occurring under the Leadership of a Renowned Chemistry Teacher (his name begins with "L", guess who it is.)

Introduction

In view of the fact that such vast numbers of witticisms have emanated from the vicinity of room 139, (commonly called chemistry room) it has been found necessary to arrange said witticisms (those juicy little morsels of human endeavor, commonly called jokes) into one complete, authentic, department.

A supplement has been added which brings this report up-to-date. It is entitled

Life of Einstein—By Bersey.

Being a summary of part of a report given before an assemblage of Chemists.

Einstein was born 40 or 50 years ago somewhere in Europe. He was pretty swell at school and has been a professor of something-or-other ever since. He has withstood the strain of being married twice. He isn't dead yet.

Mr. Leonhard—"Mr. Burdick, I don't want you to sit on that seat again."
Harry—"Why not?"
Mr. Leonhard—"You are liable to fall off and wake up."

Mr. Leonhard—"Name some cities in Wisconsin."
Loyd Kimmel—"Racine, Milwaukee and Chicago."

Mr. Leonhard—"What are glaciers?"
"Herb" Hall—"Hard water."

Mr. Leonhard—"What state is the chief poultry state?"
James Sprowl—"Rhode Island."

Bob Currie (the chemistry shark)—"Smoke is thicker than air."

Longfellow could take a worthless piece of paper, write a poem on it and make it worth $65,000.

THAT'S GENIUS

There are some men who can write a few words on a piece of paper and make it worth a million dollars.

THAT'S CAPITAL

It has been stated that U. S. A. can take one ounce and a quarter of gold and make it worth $20.00.

THAT'S MONEY

A mechanic can take material worth five dollars and make it into watch springs worth a thousand dollars.

THAT'S SKILL

There are artists who can take a fifty-cent piece of canvas, paint a picture on it, and make it worth a thousand dollars.

THAT'S ART

A merchant can take an article costing $1.00 and sell it for $1.20

THAT'S BUSINESS

There are some merchants who will tell you they can do business on 8 per cent profit. Statistics show it cost fourteen to seventeen per cent for overhead expense when a merchant tells you he is doing business without profit.

THAT'S NERVE

But when the honest merchant sells you goods at a fair profit.

Practical Co-operation

The Union Building & Loan Association receives money from one set of patrons and loans the funds to others on the security of real estate in and about Lansing.

These operations are carried on with every precaution for safety and at a very small expense. It therefore can loan money at fair rates and distribute good profits to its investors.

Money may be left in lump sums because the very best system for saving is at your command. Any number of quarters per week will bring just that number of hundreds of dollars in a little over six years. Look us up.
